

BIO

Born in Trenton, New Jersey, to Jamaican immigrants, Shauna Moon considers herself to be an experimental hip-hop artist. Inspired by Missy Elliott, Nicki Minaj, and Sean Paul, Shauna's music represents the diversity of the global hip-hop scene. Her lyrics are drawn from pop culture, as she references TV characters, anime, and current news in a storytelling format. Shauna's other interests include creative direction, fashion, and acting. Shauna has gained popularity in the Northeast with her songs, "Bankroll" and "Bodylicious." She has been labeled by others as their creative inspiration, following the release of her "Changes" music video. With visuals for "Bankroll" and "Tokyo Drip" on the way, this is just the start for Shauna Moon.
